This course is intended to introduce the history of contemporary Latin America to students with some background in the region or to students interested in knowing something about the region's most recent past at a more sophisticated level. We will explore how many nations of the region achieved successful political integration under oligarchical rule and often managed economic integration with the world market in the era 1880-1914. We will go on to analyze the nature of development in the transitional era of industrialization and urban growth that began by World War I and shifted dramatically with government intervention by the 1930s. We will examine the increased role of populism and repression as characteristic responses to the socio-economic changes of the post-1930 era. We will conclude with observations regarding the trends visible by the beginning of this century. The region is a varied one, with more than a score of nations. Thus, we will concentrate on several countries suggestive of the many experiences common in the region: these countries are Brazil, Cuba, Mexico, and Peru.

Course Requirements: Undergraduate students are expected to complete the weekly readings detailed below in a timely manner.

1. All students will take a map examination in the second week of class, during the first twenty minutes of the second session. The map examination is discussed on a sheet of paper separate from the syllabus; note that, if a student fails to pass the examination, s/he must pass it before the midterm to avoid the penalty of a drop of one grade for the student's course grade. Veterans of the instructor's other 3000-level courses in which the same examination was administered are excused from taking the examination again.
2. Students will also write a historiographical essay (see the criteria for this essay on the instructor's website, above) as their term paper. This will be an essay with a maximum length of fifteen pages. Such essays are to be printed double-spaced; they should be in formal academic style and format, with footnotes or endnotes when appropriate (parenthetical-style notes are not permitted). The format of such notes can be reviewed in the Chicago Manual of Style, or guides based on that source. The topic must be agreed upon in consultation with the instructor by the end of the fourth week of the semester. The research for this essay may be drawn from reading done in scholarly monographs, chapters from scholarly anthologies, and in articles in scholarly journals. Undergraduates are expected to read works from six or more scholars, totaling around 500 pages. The essay is due at the beginning of the first session of the twelfth week. Please see the penalties section below regarding late submission of this paper.
3. Undergraduates will also take two regular examinations: a midterm and a final. The examinations will take place in class. They will be made up of essay questions, which will be selected at the time of the examination by the professor from a list of possible questions distributed to students a week before as a study guide. The midterm will likely be administered last session of the ninth week; the final, as per the online Schedule of Courses.

Course Grades: Undergraduate students' grades will be computed from the average of three grades: those of the two regular examinations and the historiographical essay. Note the penalty for failure to pass the map examination, stated above and in the Penalties section of the syllabus, below.

Reading Responsibilities: Students will read the text noted below, keeping pace with the subject of each week's lecture.

Keen, Benjamin and Keith Haynes. A History of Latin America, vol.2, Independence to the Present, 8th ed.. Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 2009.

Lecture Schedule:

- I. Brazil: Fall of the Monarchy.
- II. Brazil: The Old Republic.
- III. Mexico: The Positivist Dictatorship.
- IV. Mexico: The Revolution.
- V. Peru: The Recovery from War, Domestic Conflict, and Dictatorship.
- VI. Peru: The Rise of APRA.
- VII. Cuba: The Wars against Spain.
- VIII. Cuba: Neo-colonialism and Nationalism.

SPRING BREAK

- IX. MIDTERM (review and examination).
- X. Brazil: The Vargas Years and Their Legacies.
- XI. Mexico: The Rise of the PRI and Its Crises.
- XII. Peru: The War Within.
- XIII. Cuba: The Revolution.
- XIV. The Spoken and the Unspoken.
- XV. Review

Advice:

Prudent students will note that the assigned reading, when combined with the additional reading for the term paper, demands disciplined, constant attention. It will be apparent that students who do not have a research topic worked out with the instructor by the date of the midterm risk a crisis in meeting their responsibilities. Since very few students are familiar with Latin American history, few come up with a topic quickly on their own. The instructor does not expect you to develop a term-paper topic on your own. He invites you to consult with him at your earliest possible convenience to decide upon a topic and receive his guidance in regard to an appropriate bibliography.

Penalties, Catastrophes, and Warnings:

1. Please note the map examination penalty noted above. Note, as well, that there are severe penalties for missing the deadline of the term paper (it must be turned in at the beginning of the session indicated; if it is turned in during the session, it is penalized a half grade; if it is turned in within the twenty-four hour period following the deadline, it is penalized a full grade; if it is turned in within the second twenty-four hour period, it is penalized two full grades; and so on). “Turned in” means delivered by hand as hard copy; email attachments will not be graded, although they may be considered as proof of completion in a documented emergency situation to avoid the late penalty. Students who must turn in their papers late are responsible for having it signed in at the time and date of submission by one of the staff of the Department of History office.
2. All components of the course must be submitted to the instructor and a grade for each component recorded by the instructor in order to earn a course grade. Thus, students who have completed everything else but do not have a recorded grade for the map examination, or for the midterm, or for the final examinations, or for the term paper will fail the course.
3. As life has been arranged so that unexpected catastrophes occur for which even the prudent and virtuous student cannot prepare, the instructor will be willing to review student petitions for a waiver of penalty (or lessening of penalty). Such waivers will be granted at the discretion of the instructor, and are most likely to be granted in those cases in which the instructor deems that the catastrophe is credible and reliably documented.
4. There is no extra credit option or possibility in this course.
5. The instructor will not tolerate cheating. The instructor will not tolerate plagiarism (the use of others’ materials without appropriate citation, credit, or permission). A student guilty of either will fail the course and the matter will be referred to, and recorded by, the appropriate university authority.
6. The instructor does not keep records of attendance. It is his assumption that adults are the best judges their best interest in this regard.
7. Students requesting classroom accommodation because of a disability must first register with the Dean of Students’ Office. That office will provide documentation to the student who must then provide that same documentation to the instructor when requesting the appropriate accommodation.

The instructor is obliged to provide other information in regard to taking the course, information on grading, the honor code, and evaluation of the instructor. Here is that information:

1. For the university’s policies with regard to grades, see:
<https://catalog.ufl.edu/ugrad/current/regulations/info/grades.aspx>
2. Regarding university policy on matters of honor, such as cheating or plagiarism, note:
3. The Honor Code (<http://www.dso.ufl.edu/scrc/process/student-conduct-honor-code/>)
4. specifies a number of behaviors that are in violation of this code and the possible sanctions. Furthermore, you are obliged to report any condition that facilitates academic misconduct to appropriate personnel. If you have any questions or concerns, please consult with the instructor.
5. Students are expected to provide feedback on the quality of instruction in this course based on 10 criteria. These evaluations are conducted online at <https://evaluations.ufl.edu>. Evaluations are typically open during the last two or three weeks of the semester, but students will be given specific times when they are open. Summary results of these assessments are available to students at <https://evaluations.ufl.edu>.
