

Seth Bernstein
Keene Flint Hall 209
Th: 12:50-3:50
Course Site: <https://ufl.instructure.com/courses/459670>

sethbernstein@ufl.edu
Office Hours:
M: 11-1; T: 12-1
(and by appointment)

EUH 4930
Research Seminar: World War II in Europe

Course Description:

The Second World War was a catastrophe that transformed Europe. Nazi Germany's brutal military campaigns led to the death of an estimated fifty million Europeans, including in unprecedented campaigns of systematic murder against civilians. The war that destroyed lives also created new ways of living. Huge number of people from around the world met in new countries as conquerors and conquered, forced laborers and masters, liberators and war criminals. The war continues to reverberate in our current conceptions of human rights, international security, and geopolitics.

The goal of this course is to produce a substantial (15-page) research paper on a topic of your choice. This course uses World War II as a canvas to practice different kinds of history writing. The history of war is often synonymous with operational histories. Military history is evolving to include the kinds of histories that assess the impact of war in society, culture, politics, and the economy, in addition to work that examines battlefield operations. Moreover, the war experience differed by country or even by region. The class readings and suggestions for research paper sources will allow students to explore a variety of topics and geographies.

The readings will come from specialist research. These works will give an example of in-depth scholarly research.

Course Goals:

1. Practice research and writing skills.
2. Consider the intersections between war and other aspects of modern life.
3. Familiarize yourselves with the history of World War II in Europe.

Course Assignments:

Participation (10%): Engagement in discussions that demonstrate a student's having read and understood assigned materials. In a three-hour seminar class, it is especially important that students prepare well for the class. At the risk of stating the obvious: Participation is not possible without attendance, but attendance does not guarantee full credit for participation.

Reflection Posts (15%): In weeks where we will be reading, students should write a short reflection post (one or two paragraphs – perhaps 250 words) on the course Canvas discussion board. These reflections can raise questions or insights about the reading, consider parallel histories, think about related possibilities for the research paper, and more. These reflections do not need to be polished prose but should be thoughtful contributions that show your work and facilitate discussion. You are welcome to respond (constructively) to others' posts.

Book Review and Presentation (15%): After reviewing the syllabus in the first week, students should sign up to give a book review on a relevant week. The book under review does not have to fit exactly with the topic for the week but should be complementary (e.g., a book about postwar memory could fit with the week on war crimes trials). Additionally, try to choose a work that fits with your research topic. Having read the book, you will give a ten-minute (maximum) presentation about it. Besides a quick summary of the book, the presentation should analyze how the work's contribution to the historiography. In other words, what is the point of the book? What aspect of the historiography is it contesting? How have (or might) other works respond to that argument? A week after the presentation (Friday 5pm), you should submit a written version of the review (750 words).

Research Paper (60%): The centerpiece of this class is the paper based on original research in the history of World War II, understood capaciously. It should investigate a problem in the field based on primary and secondary sources. It should have a clear thesis related to this problem. Work on this paper will proceed in stages over the course of the semester:

Prospectus (15%): This is a fancy way of saying a long proposal. There are three basic elements to the prospectus—what, why, and how:

1. The what: What is the history that you are proposing to explore? What is the broader context of the topic? In short, it provides a historical context. If I want to write a case study of the Holocaust at ghetto X, I need to explain the basics of the camp (Where? When? Who?) as well as well as a brief view of how it fits in the broader context of the history of the Holocaust.
2. The why: Why is this topic important in the literature? What questions have scholars asked that make this research relevant? What current events can this history help explain? What makes it different than histories on similar topics? In the hypothetical case of ghetto X, there have been many studies of ghetto life and I might explore some classics plus a few of the latest treatments to give a sense of the problems in the field. But ghetto X has received little or no attention, despite its exceptional qualities. It might be that an extraordinary number of people survived, and this ghetto can address the question of the factors that led to survival or death in ghettos. Or it could be that the population of the ghetto was unusual and allows me to test existing arguments about how the Holocaust worked under different conditions.
3. The how: What sources do you have to examine this project? Where do they come from? Who created them and how and when? How will you access them? Will they be enough to write the history you want to write? Are there any special methodological challenges? Returning to ghetto X, it might be that I am working with survivor testimony, and I would need to address the strengths and weaknesses of oral history sources. If I only have one survivor testimony, I will need to explain how I can write a history of this ghetto based on this person alone.

The prospectus should be at least 1000 words, excluding the bibliography. There must be a working title. There is no minimum number of primary sources, but you will have to justify the project based on the sources. There should be eight to ten scholarly secondary sources.

Organizational Notes (5%): Halfway through the semester, you will need to turn in organizational notes. Although there are acceptable variations, I expect thematically or chronologically organized paragraphs with citations at the end at the end of the paragraph. These paragraphs should be a midway point between raw notetaking and a draft. I will show you an example of how to make these notes during the semester.

First Draft (10%): The first draft should be a complete version of the paper. It may be that there are elements to be included later and some parts that are sketched rather than fully explored. At a minimum, the draft should be ten double-spaced, 12-point font pages of prose and include an introduction and conclusion that contain the project's main thesis. We will discuss the drafts in small groups, so the fuller they are, the better feedback you will receive.

Presentation (5%): The final two class periods will be presentations. Each student should prepare to speak for about ten minutes about their project. The presentation should convey the question that motivated the paper, the evidence you found for research, and the arguments you present. There will be about ten minutes for questions following each presentation.

Final Paper (15%): The final paper will be at least fifteen pages of prose, plus a bibliography. The grade for the paper will consider: the quality of the thesis; the depth of the research in both primary and secondary sources; the quality of the writing; the incorporation of feedback from the drafting process.

Reflection (10%): Alongside the final paper, you should submit a 1000-word reflection paper about your research. What was difficult about researching the topic? How would you approach the topic differently now? Is there another topic that you discovered that seems more attractive? What limitations did you discover about the sources or the literature? What topics would you have undertaken if you had the time and money (and perhaps language skills) to travel to a library or archive that has relevant materials?

Texts:

Each week we will be reading a different book on the history of World War II, its precedents, and its consequences. Rather than trying to encompass every aspect of the history of World War II, this course uses the war to explore various aspects and methodologies to give a sense of the approaches, sources, and topics you might consider for your research paper.

We will read an entire book most weeks. The other weeks we will read from several sources that will be the equivalent. A book a week is a lot of reading, so be prepared. Here are the books we will read in full:

Browning, Christopher R. Remembering Survival: Inside a Nazi Slave-Labor Camp. W.W. Norton, 2011.

Koestler, Arthur. Scum of the Earth. London: Eland, 2007 [1955].

Roberts, Mary Louise. What Soldiers Do: Sex and the American GI in World War II France. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2013.

Zahra, Tara. The Lost Children: Reconstructing Europe's Families after World War II. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2011.

If you are interested in reading a full history of World War II, I recommend the following:

Mawdsley Evan. World War II: A New History. Second edition. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2020.

Academic Integrity: The University of Florida holds its students to the highest standards, and we encourage students to read the University of Florida Student Honor Code and Student Conduct Code (Regulation 4.040), so they are aware of our standards. Any violation of the Student Honor Code will result in a referral the Student Conduct and Conflict Resolution and may result in academic sanctions and further student conduct action. The two greatest threats to the academic integrity of the University of Florida are cheating and plagiarism. Students should be aware of their faculty's policy on collaboration, should understand how to properly cite sources, and should not give nor receive an improper academic advantage in any manner through any medium.

Lateness Policy: An important part of students' work is meeting deadlines. Late assignments will be docked three percentage points per day overdue. Under extraordinary circumstances extensions will be granted but every effort should be made to avoid the need to take an extension.

Accommodations for Students with Disabilities: Students with disabilities who experience learning barriers and would like to request academic accommodations should connect with the disability Resource Center by visiting <https://disability.ufl.edu/students/get-started/>. It is important for students to share their accommodation letter with their instructor and discuss their access needs, as early as possible in the semester.

Online Evaluations: Students are expected to provide professional and respectful feedback on the quality of instruction in this course by completing course evaluations online via GatorEvals.

Guidance on how to give feedback in a professional and respectful manner is available at <http://gatorevals.aa.ufl.edu/students>. Students will be notified when the evaluation period opens, and can complete evaluations through the email they receive from GatorEvals, in their Canvas course menu under GatorEvals, or via ufl.bluera.com/ufl/. Summaries of course evaluation results are available to students at <http://gatorevals.aa.ufl.edu/public-results/>.

Grading Policy:

You can find University of Florida's grading policies here:

<http://catalog.ufl.edu/UGRD/academic-regulations/grades-gradingpolicies/>

Letter Grade	Percentage
A	93-100
A-	90-92
B+	87-89
B	83-86
B-	80-82
C+	77-79
C	73-76
C-	70-72
D+	67-69
D	63-66
D-	60-62

Course Schedule:

Aug. 25: Introduction: Strategic Goals and the Nature of Violence in Germany

Isabel Hull. Absolute Destruction: Military Culture and the Practices of War in Imperial Germany. Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 2005. (197-262, 291-333)

Ian Kershaw. “Working Towards the Führer’: Reflections on the Nature of the Hitler Dictatorship.” Contemporary European History 2, no. 2 (1993): 103-118.

Sep. 1: The Shock of Invasion

Koestler, Scum of the Earth.

Sep. 8: The Military in Military History on the Eastern Front

David Stahel. Operation Barbarossa and Germany's Defeat in the East. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2009. (1-69, 153-208, 423-451)

Schechter, Brandon. The Stuff of Soldiers: A History of the Red Army through Objects. Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 2019. (107-146)

Sep. 15: The Holocaust and Oral History

Browning, Remembering Survival.

Sep. 22: Sex and Occupation

Roberts, What Soldiers Do.

Sep. 29: Refugees in the Aftermath of War

Zahra, The Lost Children.

Prospectus Due

Oct. 6: Individual Meetings

I will meet with each of you individually for ~20 minutes in the class period or at a time of our agreement to discuss your prospectus and project.

Oct. 13: War Crimes and the Aftermath

Fulbrook, Mary. "Reframing the Past: Justice, Guilt, and Consolidation in East and West Germany after Nazism." Central European History 53, no. 2 (2020): 294–313.

Gross, Jan T. Fear: Anti-Semitism in Poland after Auschwitz. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2007. 31-80.

Hirsch, Francine. "The Soviets at Nuremberg: International Law, Propaganda, and the Making of the Postwar Order." The American Historical Review 113, no. 3 (2008): 701–30.
<http://www.jstor.org/stable/30223049>.

Organizational Notes Due

Oct. 20: The War on Film

Moeller, Robert G. "Winning the Peace at the Movies: Suffering, Loss and Redemption in Postwar German Cinema." In Histories of the Aftermath: The Legacies of the Second World War in Europe, edited by Frank Biess, and Robert G. Moeller, 139-155. New York: Berghahn Books, 2010.

Films TBD (Watch one of three films by agreement in the previous class.)

Oct. 27: Memory

Bergholz, Max. "The Strange Silence: Explaining the Absence of Monuments for Muslim Civilians Killed in Bosnia during the Second World War." East European Politics and Societies 24, no. 3 (2010): 408-434.

Confino, Alon. "Collective Memory and Cultural History: Problems of Method." The American Historical Review 102, no. 5 (1997): 1386–1403

Edele, Mark. "Fighting Russia's History Wars: Vladimir Putin and the Codification of World War II." History and Memory 29, no. 2 (2017): 90–124.

Nov. 3: No Class – Work on Papers

First draft due

Nov. 10: Revisions

We will meet briefly to discuss the papers, then in small groups, times to be decided. You will be responsible for reading papers of three or four of your peers in addition to the following:

Hunt, Lynn. "The Art of History: How Writing Leads to Thinking." Perspectives on History.
February 1, 2010.

Nov. 17: Presentations I

Dec. 1: Presentations II

Final paper and reflection paper due December 14, 10pm.