

Spring 2023 Internship Opportunity with Alachua County Public Schools

Interested in a career in teaching? Want to know how curriculums are created? Get in on the ground floor of a new curriculum guide for Alachua County Teachers with an internship with Alachua County Public Schools, where they are beginning the process of creating a curriculum guide for teacher to assist them with instructional content to carry out a state mandate from Florida Statute 1003.42(2)(q), which requires K-12 instruction on “the study of women’s contributions to the United States.”

Interns will work closely with K-12 Social Studies Curriculum Specialist Jon Rehm to create a document to be used by teaches across all subject areas for instruction on women’s contributions. The guide will delineate for teacher which important individuals and topics are to be taught at each grade level, K-12. It should progress in complexity and narrative over the course of the 13 grade levels to give a broad overview of the important contributions of women to the nation. This will be accomplished through grade level specific: instructional focus areas, grade level expectations, essential questions, important topics/ individuals to be taught, background information, recommended activities, and assessments.

This internship will require approximately 150 hours of service over the semester and upon successful completion, interns will receive three credits for the course, HIS4944: History Department Internship. Most of the work will be self-directed and the internship will not require a great deal of off-campus travel.

For more details, contact the History Department’s Beyond 120 Coordinator, Dr. Sean Adams, at spadams@ufl.edu.