Before we discuss the nuts and bolts of the class, I need to talk about the trying times under which this class will be taught this semester. I hope to engage you through this course with empowerment, agency, community, and care. As a group (professor, grad students TAs, and undergrad students), we need to think about meaningful activities beyond the classroom that extend the lessons of the course, building in ways students can be co-teachers as well as co-learners, actively contributing to their own education and empowerment, connecting students across the barriers of courses, institutions, and locations. We need to think about what we all can offer one another--curiosity, imagination, knowledge, power--as antidotes to the present disruption, as tools towards helping us not only survive but thrive a bit as we navigate these times. We will experience challenges from technology and interaction that may seem daunting. Understand that I too am facing same challenges you are- none of us want to be in this situation. But we are here and we will make the best of it, persevere, and have as good a semester as we can. The key to this is communication- If you have questions, concerns, issues, or problems. PLEASE let me know and we can try to answer or alleviate them as quickly as possible.

This American History course covers the history of the United States from Reconstruction to as close to the present as we can get. I have always centered this class around the ideas of land, labor, and race. In these times, these ideas become even more important, as they provide an understanding of where we are today regarding race, gender, and class. Because of the state of the world right now, we will also focus on the relationship of “natural” disasters, such as plagues, pandemics, and hurricanes, to social factors as they relate to the time period we will be studying. My goal with this course is to have you think about HOW and WHY the period this class covers relates to and helps to shape the nation and the world as it exists today.

Since the Friday TA sections are discussion based, it is imperative that you attend them. I am working really hard to make this a great class- I understand we may have issues or problems along the way but if we all hang in there, it WILL work!

It is important that you keep up with the class on Canvas. I will send LOTS (maybe too many!) of Canvas announcements on both course content and class issues. Please read them & let me know if you have questions. You also need to keep up with the assigned readings, as they supplement, not duplicate, class lectures and discussions.

According to current Florida state statutes, all students in the state university system “must demonstrate competency in civic literacy” in order to graduate. AMH 2020 has been designated by the Legislature as one of two classes (POS 2041 being the other) that can cover this requirement. In addition to the subjects that we will concentrate on mentioned above, this course will therefore also focus on civic literacy requirements as defined by state statute. These include “an understanding of the basic principles of American democracy and how they are applied in our republican form of government, an understanding of the United States Constitution, knowledge of the founding documents and how they have shaped the nature and functions of our institutions of self-governance, and an understanding of landmark Supreme Court cases and their impact on law and society.” These will be embedded in the course content and reflected by course competencies and student learning outcomes that are listed later in this syllabus.

Your grade for this course will be determined in the following manner:

Final take home blog project-	25%
Midterm exam-	20%
Book Analysis Paper	20%
Quizzes	15%
Readings	10%
TA participation	10%

Grades will be assigned according to the following scale. There will be extra credit available- the assignment will be given after the midterm.

	A	93-100	A-	90-92
B+	87-89	B	83-86	B-	80-82
C+	77-79	C	73-76	C-	70-72
D+	68-69	D	66-67	D-	64-65

Assignments

Readings: For every week that you have assigned readings from Women, Families, and Communities (called WFC in the syllabus) and After the Fact (called ATF in the syllabus, you will turn in on Friday a short one-page summary and analysis of the WFC readings (no need to write on the textbook readings) for that week. These summaries will all be turned in on Canvas. You will receive either a 1 or a .5 (or a 0!) for each week's assignment. The total points you can earn for this assignment is 10. More on this as the semester progresses.

Why this assignment? These are assigned to insure that you are doing the readings that will be discussed in TA sections. They tie in issues of gender to the broader themes of the larger American history narrative.

Quizzes: There will also be seven quizzes given throughout the semester. They will be short in duration (5-10 minutes) and consist of multiple-choice questions dealing mainly with the issues raised in class and the text. Only six quizzes will be counted into the final grade averaging, I will drop the lowest grade.

Why this assignment? These quizzes are given to ensure that you are keeping up on the class narrative and have a working knowledge of the subject matter. They will also be done on Canvas.

Midterm: The midterm exam will be given on Friday, March 10th at the mid-point of the semester. This exam will be composed of both essay questions and short-answer identifications which will be given to you beforehand. The exam will be completed on Canvas and turned in that way.

Why this assignment? The midterm is in this form to insure students know the class material up to that point and also that they can write about that material in a clear and persuasive manner.

Analysis Paper: You will have to write an analysis paper on the assigned book, to be 4-6 pages in length. The paper will be due through Canvas on Friday April 7. Instructions on the paper will be posted on the front page of Canvas by the beginning of the course.

Why this assignment? The paper is assigned to ensure that students read the book. It also is designed to measure student writing ability over this length of an assignment and their capacity to engage with the prompt in a coherent and literate fashion.

Final Blog Assignment: There will be no final exam for the class. Instead, you will construct a blog through WordPress that will focus on a topic you choose dealing with course content and its interaction with issues raised throughout the course. Much more on this as the semester progresses. The blog shell with a sample blog that I have developed can be found on the front page of our class Canvas site.

Why this assignment? Getting students engaged in the course can be difficult. During the pandemic, I decided to try this type of assignment for the final, rather than a final exam that mirrored the midterm. Students responded very well to this and produced blogs that were insightful, interesting, and tied to course content. I hope this trend will continue this semester.

TA participation: Students will receive up to 10 points for participating in Friday TA discussions. This part of the grade will be given by your TA. Participation means 1. Coming to section 2. Coming to section prepared 3. Interacting with the TA and other students in section on the material for the week.

Why this assignment? This assignment gets students to be involved with the course material, with their TA, and with other students. It promotes dialog and student involvement and participation.

I encourage questions and class discussion during the Monday & Wednesday lecture classes. Please do not hesitate to ask both factual and interpretative questions. If you have specific questions on the subject matter or grading, please contact me via Zoom, so that we can talk “face to face” or come by the listed office hours. I also encourage you to contact me by e-mail as I respond promptly to questions, concerns, or comments.

Syllabus & Course Instructions

Class attendance is an important component of your learning experience. Since students are adults, a mandatory attendance policy will not be in effect for the lecture part of this course. I understand the potential problems of dealing with attending classes during this difficult time but I really hope you will attend class when it is scheduled unless you have a health problem or a university function. Attending the lecture live will allow you to participate in discussion during the lecture! Thanks. However, during the Friday TA sessions, since those are discussion based, you will need to attend on a regular every Friday basis. As in all courses, unauthorized recording and unauthorized sharing of recorded materials is prohibited.

Students requesting classroom accommodations for disability issues must first register with the Office of the Dean of Students. This office will provide documentation to the student who then must provide this documentation to me. I am more than willing to do whatever is necessary to ensure an optimum learning environment for all students. This is especially problematic during this time of pandemic, but I will work extra hard to accommodate student disability needs. Here is the link for the UF Disability Resource Center

Please be aware of the University's policy on plagiarism. The Internet has made this situation more problematic but understand that plagiarists will be caught. Any questions about what constitutes plagiarism, please do not hesitate to ask. All plagiarism offenses will be reported on a Faculty Adjudication Form and forwarded to the Office of Student Judicial Affairs. You may get more information on UF's Judicial Affairs process at

Course Objectives for Civic Literacy Requirement

Course Objectives of AMH 2020 will:

1. Introduce students to the evolution of the basic principles of American democracy and how they have been applied in our republican form of government from the mid-19th century to the present.

2. Examine representations of the meaning of American citizenship by a wide range of authors representing various academic, policy, and community perspectives.
3. Explore the ways that different groups' relationships with American government at all levels reflect (and help to construct) their racial, class, and gendered identities and also shape the meaning of American citizenship.
4. Introduce the idea that the various meanings of citizenship within American democracy are produced in dialogue with imaginative writings about it and personal/community interpretations of it.
5. Invite students to build their reading, writing, and oral communication skills through careful reflection (individual in Reading Journals and Papers; group in Class Discussion) on landmark Supreme Court cases and their impact on law and society.

Student Learning Outcomes (SLOs) for Civic Literacy

Upon completion of AMH 2020 students will be able to:

1. Identify, describe, and explain the historical evolution of the American form of government throughout modern American history (Civil War to the present), with attention to the ways government officials in general and the Supreme Court in particular have shaped this growth.
2. Identify, describe, and explain the ways in which diverse cultures and beliefs have shaped the meaning of the United States Constitution and its interpretation.
3. Analyze and evaluate how the interaction and intervention of government officials at all levels have shaped and re-shaped the meanings of American democracy and the evolution of the American republic form of government.
4. Analyze and evaluate how the basic principles of American democracy and how they are applied in our republican form of government have affected the opportunities for and constraints on diverse American populations.
5. Analyze, evaluate, and critically reflect on their own community's relationships to American democracy, and to the implications of this for their intellectual, personal, and professional development at UF and beyond.
6. Using oral and written forms appropriate to the relevant humanities disciplines incorporated into the course, develop and present clear and effective responses, both written and oral, to essential questions regarding the origins of the American republic and the evolving nature of American democracy in the period from the end of the Civil War to today.

Broad Student Learning Outcomes of this course as a humanities course

HUMANITIES DESCRIPTION: Humanities courses provide instruction in the history, key themes, principles, terminology, and theory or methodologies used within a humanities discipline or the humanities in general. Students will learn to identify and to analyze the key elements, biases and influences that shape thought. These courses emphasize clear and effective analysis and approach issues and problems from multiple perspectives.

o HUMANITIES Student Learning Outcomes (SLOs)

- Identify, describe, and explain the history and underlying theory of the basic principles of American democracy and how they are applied in our republican form of government since the Civil War (Content).
- Identify and analyze key elements, biases and influences that have shaped the development of American democracy since the Civil War. Approach issues and problems in the nature and functions of our institutions of self-governance, from multiple perspectives (Critical Thinking).
- Communicate knowledge, thoughts, and reasoning clearly and effectively regarding the basic principles of American democracy and how they were applied in our republican form of government during the time period after the Civil War to contemporary times (Communication).
